

Eveline Fuchs studied law at Leiden University. She joined KPMG after finishing her degree. She then continued her professional career primarily in real estate and banking, holding a number of managerial positions.

In 2008 Eveline was employed as an interim manager at both for-profit as well as non-profit organizations, during which time she was responsible for department merger processes and reorganization projects.

Eveline's character fits seamlessly with the spirit of enterprise and determination that is the hallmark of Interlace executive search. She enjoys a challenge and takes pride in providing her clients with workable solutions. Moreover, she is highly adept at ensuring that talented candidates flourish in an environment which is conducive to drawing out their full potential.

Eveline enjoys golfing and skiing in her leisure time. She is also an ambassador for the Out of Bounds Foundation, which helps cancer sufferers who have been knocked 'out of bounds' get back on their feet. Furthermore, Eveline founded a nationwide organization of estate agents that primarily serve first-time home buyers. She continues to provide consulting services to this organization.
