

Jan Willem Brinkman studied at the Royal Military Academy and went on to complete the Dutch army's senior management training courses. He held various operational command and staff positions but eventually, having risen to the rank of Major General, decided to pursue a career outside the military.

Following a brief appointment as police commissioner, he entered the world of interim management. His many 'postings' include the chairmanship of large health care organisations. Jan Willem is now managing partner of InterBoard Interim Executives and also acts as an Interface consultant recruiting senior executives for the health care sector.

In 2006, Jan Willem was awarded a doctorate by Tilburg University for his dissertation entitled 'Dynamics and uncertainty as an opportunity'. In it, he highlights the many opportunities which today's era presents to the public and private sectors alike. Jan Willem is on the board of several non-profit organisations and is a guest lecturer in Leadership and Change Management at the TiasNimbas Business School, a faculty of Tilburg University.
